TTR Appeal Decision 28 August 2018

TTR is disappointed with the High Court outcome released on Tuesday 28 August 2018.

Of the eight different grounds of appeal only one was upheld and that was solely in relation to the correct legal meaning of “adaptive management” or the type of environmental compliance monitoring required to be incorporated in the TTR consents.

The outcome on the application of the law with regard to adaptive management is being referred back to the DMC (EPA) by the Court for reconsideration applying the correct legal test of the concept.

TTR is reviewing our QC’s detailed assessment of the ruling and considering our options before being able to comment further.
